Call for evidence for an evaluation: EU rules of origin [download]

What is changing and why?

The European Commission has launched a comprehensive review of the European Union (EU) rules of origin – the rules that determine where a product comes from and (for example) the import tariffs that apply. The review will assess the effectiveness of existing rules, including potential problems that these rules may create for competent authorities.

The review involves a public consultation: stakeholders in non-EU countries can provide input on their experience with the EU rules of origin before 2 December 2025.

Actions

Stakeholders in non-EU countries are encouraged to participate in this public consultation. Stakeholders may respond either by filling in a questionnaire, or by providing information in their chosen format via the Call for Evidence; both can be accessed through the European Commission's Have your say webpage.

The deadline for feedback via both routes is 2 December 2025.

Organisations wishing to respond must be registered. First Create an EU login account, then register your organisation on the Transparency Register.
