

Guidelines on the EU Forced Labour Regulation

Published by AGRINFO on 20 Feb 2026

Development of EU guidelines on Forced Labour Regulation

Guidelines on the implementation of the EU rules on forced labour

Update

The European Commission has been requesting input from stakeholders to inform its proposed new guidelines on implementing the Forced Labour Regulation. The Commission's call for evidence from stakeholders closed on 6 March 2026.

Regulation 2024/3015 will apply from 14 December 2027. It prohibits operators from placing products made with forced labour on the EU market, and prohibits the export of such products from the EU.

Impacted products

All products

What is changing?

The EU has been inviting contributions to help develop its proposed guidelines for implementing the Forced Labour Regulation 2024/3015. These will include guidelines for:

- competent authorities on the practical implementation of the Regulation
- economic operators on due diligence related to forced labour (e.g. monitoring, auditing, and documentation of labour practices along the supply chain)
- civil society organisations, victims, and other stakeholders on how to submit information regarding potential violations of the ban.

By consulting widely on the core elements of the forthcoming guidelines, the European Commission aims to ensure they are comprehensive, clear, and fit for purpose.

For further information on the Regulation, see Prohibition of products made with forced labour.

Why?

The Forced Labour Regulation (Art. 11) requires the European Commission to publish implementation guidelines by 14 June 2026. These guidelines are intended to help competent authorities, businesses, and stakeholders apply the Regulation in a practical and effective way, while also reducing the burden on administrations and companies.

Timeline

The European Commission will publish the implementation guidelines by 14 June 2026.

What are the major implications for exporting countries?

Exporters and producers in non-EU countries will need to ensure that their supply chains are free from forced labour. This may require enhanced monitoring, auditing, and documentation of labour practices across all suppliers and subcontractors.

Countries participating in EU trade schemes such as the Generalised Scheme of Preferences and Economic Partnership Agreements may see their market access affected if forced labour risks are not mitigated.

Recommended Actions

Feedback via the European Commission's Have Your Say webpage Guidelines on the implementation of the EU rules on forced labour closed on 6 March 2026.

Background

Forced labour is a global issue that violates human dignity and fundamental rights, and perpetuates poverty, obstructing the Sustainable Development Goal of decent work for all. The International Labour Organization estimates that 27.6 million people are subject to forced labour (ILO et al. 2022). Recognised by the ILO as a fundamental rights principle, its elimination requires international cooperation across interconnected global supply chains.

The EU Forced Labour Regulation has been in force since 13 December 2024, and will apply from 14 December 2027. It prohibits economic operators from placing on the EU market, or exporting, products made with forced labour. To ensure effective implementation, the European Commission will cooperate and exchange information with non-EU authorities, international organisations, civil society, trade unions, and business groups. Cooperation will be structured through existing frameworks including human rights and political dialogues, trade and sustainable development dialogues, the Generalised Scheme of Preferences, and EU development initiatives.

Resources

Council of the EU (2025) Council and Parliament strike a deal to reinforce rules on trade preferences to developing countries. Press release, 1 December.

European Commission (2026) The Forced Labour Regulation.

ILO, Wlax Free, and IOM (2022) Global Estimates of Modern Slavery: Forced Labour and Forced Marriage. International Labour Organization.

Regulation (EU) 2024/3015 on prohibiting products made with forced labour on the Union market.

Sources

Guidelines on the implementation of the EU rules on forced labour

Visit the AGRINFO website to view the latest AGRINFO Update newsletters and search the database.

Disclaimer: Under no circumstances shall COLEAD be liable for any loss, damage, liability or expense incurred or suffered that is claimed to have resulted from the use of information available on this website or any link to external sites. The use of the website is at the user's sole risk and responsibility. This information platform was created and maintained with the financial support of the European Union. Its contents do not, however, reflect the views of the European Union.