

Meat inspection procedures: incisions, information, and health marks

Published by AGRINFO on 11 Jan 2025

Draft Commission Implementing Regulation laying down uniform practical arrangements for the performance of official controls on products of animal origin intended for human consumption

What is changing and why?

To reduce the risk of cross-contamination, the EU proposes to change meat inspection rules. The proposed new Regulation states that post-mortem inspections of meat (veal, beef, lamb, sheep, goats, horses, and pigs) should only use the specific incisions and palpations relevant to abnormalities found by inspectors, rather than all incisions and palpations.

The farmer's obligation to communicate certain information prior to slaughter is extended to include emergency slaughter, and slaughter on farm.

Following inspections, inspectors must apply health marks to meat to indicate it is fit for consumption. The current rules refer only to meat from slaughterhouses; these rules will be extended to include meat from game-handling establishments.

Actions

Authorities in countries that are members of the World Trade Organization can provide feedback on the EU's proposal (G/SPS/N/EU/803) by emailing the EU SPS Enquiry Point until 16 February 2025.

In addition, all stakeholders can provide feedback via the EU's Have your say webpage by 5 February 2025.

Timeline

The Regulation is expected to be adopted in March 2025.

For more information see the full record on the AGRINFO website – where you can also view the latest AGRINFO Update newsletters and search the database.

Disclaimer: Under no circumstances shall COLEAD be liable for any loss, damage, liability or expense incurred or suffered that is claimed to have resulted from the use of information available on this website or any link to external sites. The use of the website is at the user's sole risk and responsibility. This information platform was created and maintained with the financial support of the European Union. Its contents do not, however, reflect the views of the European Union.