What is changing and why?

The European Commission is collecting feedback and evidence from stakeholders to inform a revision of the Unfair Trading Practices (UTP) Directive. Stakeholders are invited to complete a form on the European Commission's Have Your Say webpage.

Non-EU agri-food suppliers who sell directly to an EU buyer (not via an intermediary) are protected by these rules. However, a recent evaluation shows a low level of awareness about the Directive among non-EU stakeholders. The review of the Directive also aims to tackle potential new UTPs – particularly practices that shift disproportionate risks or costs onto suppliers, including more complex arrangements linked to buyers' sustainability-related commitments.

Actions

This consultation is an opportunity for EU and non-EU stakeholders – including farmers and suppliers of agricultural and food products, as well as associations – to contribute to improving their protection against UTPs.

Feedback can be given through the European Commission's Have Your Say webpage until 27 February 2026. Stakeholders wishing to respond must be registered. Those who do not already have an account will first need to Create an EU login account, then register their organisation on the Transparency register.

Timeline

The adoption of the revised UTP Directive is scheduled for the fourth quarter of 2026.
